

Diverse opinions on “Christian women persecution” led the author to do this study. Study includes how women in general and Christian women in specific are being discriminated in India. Christian women are classified by two categories. One is persecuted exclusively for their faith and the other is doubly afflicted for their faith and gender itself. Paper also presents some of the key causes for the afflicted status of women and response of the Christians and churches to their sufferings. A brief, biblical and theological analysis is made to understand two distinct “suffering” categories – suffering for faith in the Lord Jesus and suffering in relation to eschatological procedures. Study concludes with suppositions derived from the study and suggestions of the author to the churches and Christians in India at large as they move way forward.
